

A photograph of two people sitting on a beach at sunset. The person on the left is wearing a red jacket, and the person on the right is wearing a grey jacket and has curly hair. They are both looking out at the ocean. In the background, a wooden pier extends into the water. The sky is a mix of orange and blue.

Did you know proper grammar is a social construct?

That's BS.

I'm serious. Each dialect has its own grammar structure. Speaking 'standard' English is highly attributed to white speakers, so calling a nonstandard dialect
incorrect is preferring 'white'
English.

Wow. Thanks for explaining that. You're a real friend.

Next time you're about to correct someone's grammar, consider your privilege.

Courtesy of the Department of Linguistics.