I'm serious. Each dialect has its own grammar structure. Speaking 'standard' English is highly attributed to white speakers, so calling a nonstandard dialect incorrect is preferring 'white' English.

That's BS.

Did you know proper grammar is a social construct?

Wow. Thanks for explaining that. You're a real friend.

Next time you're about to correct someone's grammar, consider your privilege.

Courtesy of the Department of Linguistics.