Introduction

Provide enough information about relevant theory and research to give the reader an understanding of why you conducted the study. Present concise points.

• Use of bullets can help you convey information succinctly

Method

Provide an overview of the methodological details. Include the following sections, as appropriate:

Participants
Materials
Procedure

Font colors can help you emphasize differences in conditions, manipulations, measures, etc.

Results

Present the main findings and the statistics (e.g., mean standard deviation, F test). You may present a figure or table to graphically illustrate the results. If you include figures or tables, briefly describe the findings in the text.

Discussion

Discuss the implications of your findings, limitations of the study, and directions for future research.

Hypotheses

State your hypotheses in the context of the theory and research described above.
